How To Use A Dumpy

A dumpy level does not refer to a level far past its prime, but rather to an instrument used to measure, transfer, or set horizontal lines. Also called a builder's level, an automatic level, or a leveling instrument, these gadgets are often used in surveying buildings or land to establish relative height, distance, and bearings from different parts of a site.

A level is an optical instrument used to establish or verify points in the same horizontal plane in a process known as levelling, and is used in conjunction with a levelling staff to establish the relative heights levels of objects or marks. It is widely used in surveying and construction to measure height differences and to transfer, measure, and set heights of known objects or marks.
