WASHINGTON — No such thing. That was the verdict delivered by the security guard inside the Ronald Reagan Building on the question of whether there existed a museum of the Environmental Protection Agency and, more to the point, whether that museum was somewhere within this airy warren of federal offices in downtown Washington.

The Supreme Court's decision in Brown v. Board of Education in 1954 has long been heralded as a landmark in the progress of civil rights in the United States. But as the forces opposing affirmative action and supporting resegregation have gained ground in recent years, its legacy has been questioned. Some wonder whether the decision did more harm than good, by fomenting a backlash, or ...

It conjures a certain class of frustration to think of all the things that can be quantitatively defined but lie far from intuitive grasp. For instance, every second of every day since the Earth was born some 4.54 billion years ago, the Sun pumps out 10^{26} Watts of power in the form of light and broader spectrum electromagnetic radiation. 10^{17} watts reach across the 150,000,000 kilometers of ...
